“The State of the Campus”

Kim A. Wilcox
Chancellor, University of California Riverside

The stories of groundbreaking research, community engagement, and individual achievement coming from UCR are impressive and inspiring. In just the past few months, the California Air Resources Board selected UCR and Riverside to locate its new research facility; the campus put the finishing touches on a transformative master plan study; and federal research funding to UCR reached an all-time high. Our women student athletes won two Big West Conference Championships as well as our first individual National Champion since becoming a Division One school.

Currently, initiatives are underway to grow the faculty, develop new and enhanced facilities, and position UCR as a truly global university. The UCR School of Public Policy welcomed its first class of graduate students; the School of Business launched its Economic Forecasting Center; and we are only one year away from the School of Medicine graduating its first class of doctors.

Next month, many UCR students will become the first in their families to graduate from college, providing them the greatest opportunity to transform their family’s socio-economic position in just a single generation.

With his deep commitment to supporting scholarly excellence, providing students with access to a world class higher education, and promoting meaningful public engagement, you won’t want to miss Chancellor’s Wilcox’s State of the Campus address to the Citizens University Committee. He will highlight recent successes, what goals we will strive for, and the opportunities that lie ahead. Make your plans to join us on May 25th!
