“Historian as Detective: The Search For The REAL Dolley Madison”

Catherine Allgor
UCR Professor of History

In 1951, Mary Estelle Elizabeth Cutts published the first biography of First Lady Dolley Madison. This book helped cement the legend and myth of Madison. But was it true? Did it “gloss over” some of the less flattering moments and characters from her life? What did the Madison family really think about Dolley? What was her REAL view on slavery?

In the course of her study of First Lady Dolley Madison, UCR history professor Catherine Allgor discovered that there was far more to the story than the one described by Cutts, who was also Dolley’s niece. Allgor began a quest to find the "real" Dolley Madison. And while it turns out that Madison really was the savvy politician and well-connected political player we all know, she also discovered much more about the First Lady, as well as Mary Cutts' own fascinating story. You won’t want to miss one of UCR’s most dynamic speakers tell the story of her quest as a real life “history detective.”

Catherine Allgor, who joined the UCR faculty in 2001, is known nationally for her research about the role of women in American political history, particularly first ladies. She was appointed by President Obama to the James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation Board of Trustees and is an adviser to the National Women’s History Museum. She is the author of “A Perfect Union: Dolley Madison and the Creation of the American Nation” and “Parlor Politics: In Which the Ladies of Washington Help Build a City and a Government.” After a career in the theatre, Allgor attended Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts and graduated summa cum laude in History. She received her Ph.D. from Yale University. Her dissertation on women and politics in early Washington garnered prizes for the best dissertation in American history at Yale and the best dissertation in U.S. Women’s history in the country.
